Tip of the Month

Be sure to ask how your child's paper work is handled!

A child's Social Security number can be used by identity thieves to apply for government benefits, open bank and credit card accounts, apply for a loan or utility service, or rent a place to live. Check for a credit report to see if your child's information is being misused. Take immediate action if it is.

Many school forms require personal and, sometimes, sensitive information. Find out how your child's information is collected, used, stored, and thrown away. Your child's personal information is protected by law. Asking schools and other organizations to

Data Breaches Hit Half of America

Almost half of all American consumers (45%) said data security breaches have compromised their personal payment information or that of a household member.

Three years of data covered in the report by Verizon, included the results for Fortune 500 and large multinational firms in more than 30 countries. Verizon researchers found that 80% of all firms studied failed their compliance assessments.

"Today's cybersecurity landscape is constantly changing," said Rodolphe Simonetti, managing director, professional services for Verizon Enterprise Solutions. "Compliance at a point in time isn't sufficient to protect data. Putting the focus on making compliance sustainable is key. It must be a part of day-to-day activities within an organization's greater security strategy."

"Data protection is not just about using encryption, firewalls and antivirus," Verizon wrote in the report. "It's about ongoing scoping, configuration maintenance, identity management, logging, monitoring, scanning and testing. Security is something you do, not something you have. The low results of testing security systems show that many organizations still don't recognize this."

What To Do If Your Child's Identity Is Stolen

There are several signs that can tip you off to the fact that someone is misusing your child's personal information. You may be turned down for government benefits, receive collection calls for products or services you or your child did not order and possibly a notice from the IRS saying the child did not pay income taxes.

Start by checking for a credit report and keep record of all communication.

To repair the damage, put out a fraud alert immediately with the 3 nationwide credit reporting companies. Contact the business where the child's information was misused. Consider requesting a credit freeze, order and review the child's credit report.

There are other ways to help repair the damage click the link below to read more.
