DEAR ALL POINTS SHREDDING CUSTOMER:

News Alert!

On Friday, the United States Office of Personnel Management (OPM) confirmed yet another data breach, just over a week after it announced that an estimated 4 million current and former government employees were compromised. The second breach is reported to be even larger than the first, and may include the information of high-ranking U.S. intelligence employees. Click Here to Learn More

Tip of the Month

Shred Documents

Avoid storing documents that contain personal information you no longer need including: credit card applications, insurance forms, financial statements, health forms, and other billing statements.

Shred all unnecessary documents that contain personal information. Garbage cans are goldmines for identity thieves.

Sincerely,

Brian M. Connelly
Owner & President

Hiring A Shredding Vendor Is The Best Way To Prevent a Data Breach

A recent survey found that most breaches do not occur on line. Instead, the majority of data breaches that occurred last year originated with a brick-and-mortar store or financial institution, according to a recent Consumer Reports survey more than 70 million Americans discovered their personal information was compromised in 2014. These types of breaches are preventable by hiring a shredding vendor and adopting a "shred everything, all the time, in the same manner policy. While some of those incidents may have resulted from stolen credit cards or other crimes, many stemmed from data breaches.

Among the latest proposals in Congress is the Consumer Privacy Protection Act, would cover not only financial data, but also things like photos and videos stored in the cloud. It would require companies to notify consumers of a breach within 30 days.

Keeping Identity Theft Out Of Your Business

As a small business owner there are many things you can do to minimize the risk of facilitating an identity theft crime, and to minimize the loss if your security precautions fail.

Business owners need to start developing and implementing a security strategy today to ensure that they're not tomorrow's headline.

Key to good security is learning to Think Security First! so that security awareness is as second-nature as being polite to customers, and kicks-in automatically into every business decision and action.

ID thieves need very specific information in order to launch an effective ID theft. The most valuable information is a Social Security number - yours, your customers' and your employees'. Other target information includes credit card data, bank accounts, and family information.

The surge in data breaches in the last five years has resulted in a wave of federal and state regulations designed to force business of all size to better protect their data and their customers.
